Join the Congressional Multiple Sclerosis Caucus

At the beginning of this new Congress, you have the opportunity to help those living with MS. You will have the chance to actively engage in discussions about access to quality health care, increased MS research, and disability rights, among other MS related issues. You can help address the challenges of each person whose life is affected by MS. The MS Caucus co-chairmen Congressmen Russ Carnahan (MO) and Michael Burgess, M.D. (TX) and Senators Robert P. Casey (PA) and Orrin Hatch (UT) invite you to join.

Members of the Congressional MS Caucus will…

- Seek creative solutions to the challenges facing people with MS; and,
- Raise awareness and promote education about MS in our efforts to move closer to a world free of this disease.
- Speak at or attend an informative briefing on MS

About MS

Multiple Sclerosis, an unpredictable, often disabling disease of the central nervous system, interrupts the flow of information within the brain, and between the brain and body. Symptoms range from numbness and tingling to blindness and paralysis. The progress, severity and specific symptoms of MS in any one person cannot yet be predicted, but advances in research and treatment are moving us closer to a world free of MS. Most people with MS are diagnosed between the ages of 20 and 50, with at least two to three times more women than men being diagnosed with the disease. MS affects more than 400,000 people in the U.S. and over 2.1 million worldwide.
