National Multiple Sclerosis Society

Please Join the Congressional Multiple Sclerosis Caucus

What is multiple sclerosis (MS)?

- MS is an unpredictable, often disabling disease of the central nervous system.
- MS interrupts the flow of information within the brain, and between the brain and body.
- Symptoms range from numbness and tingling to blindness and paralysis.
- The progress, severity and specific symptoms of MS in any one person cannot yet be predicted, but advances in treatment and medical research are moving us toward a world free of MS.

Issues That Impact People with MS

Members of the Caucus can help people living with MS by engaging in discussions about issues such as:

- MS research at the National Institutes of Health and Congressionally Directed Medical Research Programs;
- Access to quality health care in Medicare, Medicaid and the private insurance market;
- Access to health care in rural and underserved areas of our country;
- Long-term care and supports, including caregiving programs;
- Employment issues and Social Security Disability Insurance; and
- Disability rights.

Request

You can help address the challenges of each person whose life is affected by MS by joining the Congressional MS Caucus.

To join please contact the offices of the MS Caucus co-chairs Representatives Michael Burgess, M.D. (TX-26) and Chris Van Hollen (MD-8) and Senator Robert Casey (PA).

Members of the Congressional MS Caucus will . . .

- Seek creative solutions to the challenges facing people with MS;
- Raise awareness and promote education about MS in our efforts to move closer to a world free of this disease;
- Network with others who would like to move closer to a world free of MS;
- Speak at or attend an informative briefing on MS.
