Discrimination on the Job

Discrimination under the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA):

• Treating an employee differently on the basis of disability
• Failing to provide a reasonable accommodation, absent undue hardship

Other Laws:

• Rehabilitation Act
• Family and Medical Leave Act
• State and Local Laws
Polling Question

What is your biggest concern about discrimination on the job?

• Losing your job and/or insurance
• Being treated differently
• Being denied accommodations
• Going through a legal battle
Discrimination on the Job

Examples and Options
You have MS and have had a flare up. You do not need accommodations right now, but decide to disclose in case you need accommodations in the future. After your disclosure, you notice that you are not getting the same assignments as coworkers, which is affecting your pay.
Discrimination on the Job

Options?

• Ask your supervisor about it.
• Point out successful performance record.
• Explain your choice to disclose.
• Appeal to higher ups.
Discrimination on the Job

Different Treatment to Access a Benefit of Employment

Your employer has a telework program allowing employees to telework up to 3 times a week at their supervisor’s discretion. You mention to your supervisor that you want to telework because of your MS. Your supervisor gives you ADA paperwork to take to your doctor.
Discrimination on the Job

Options?

• Clarify that you are using the telework program available to all.
• Contact HR.
• If your supervisor would otherwise deny your request, make a formal accommodation request.
Discrimination on the Job

Negative Treatment after an Accommodation Request

As a social worker, you have a large caseload that requires a lot of driving, which is making your fatigue worse. You ask to be reassigned to another caseload with less driving. Your employer puts you on leave, citing safely concerns because you transport children sometimes.
Discrimination on the Job

Options?

• Make a written statement about your ability to perform your job safely.
• Consider attaching a note from your doctor.
• Ask to at least return to work and perform all other functions if your employer still has concerns.
Discrimination on the Job

Accommodation Denied

You are a customer service representative working in a cubicle. You have MS and are having trouble concentrating due to the distractions in your work area. You ask to move to a private office. Your supervisor says no because if you get a private office, others will want one.
Discrimination on the Job

Options?

• Make a written request, send a copy to HR.
• But might want to explore other options.
• Call JAN or other resource if needed.
Discrimination on the Job

Accommodation Changed

Years ago your supervisor decided to remove an essential job function as an accommodation for you. Now a new supervisor says you must be able to perform all of your job or you will be terminated.
Discrimination on the Job

Options?

• Make a written accommodation request.
• Ask for a reassignment if needed.
Discrimination on the Job

Laid Off or Downsized

You are preparing to return to work after taking leave due to an MS flare up. You were assured that your job would be held, but after you are released to return to work your employer says your job has been eliminated due to downsizing.
Discrimination on the Job

Options?

• Try to find out if you were the only one downsized.
• Try to find out if your position was filled.

General Tips for Dealing with Potential Discrimination

• Document
• Involve Higher Ups
• Offer Solutions
Discrimination on the Job

Retaliation and Harassment

You ask for an accommodation and turn in supporting medical documentation. In the documentation, your employer sees that your doctor recommended medication that you opted not to take because of its side effects. Your employer says that if you do not try the medication first, he will not consider your accommodation.

Tips for Dealing with Potential Retaliation or Harassment

- Document
- Report It to Higher Ups
- Take Legal Action
When to Get a Lawyer

• A bad event at work: Examples
  • Denial of reasonable accommodation
  • Termination
  • Hostile work environment
  • Being treated differently because of your MS
  • Retaliation for engaging in legally protected act
  • Wrongful disclosure of medical information
Lawyers: How to find one

Referral Sources:

• National Multiple Sclerosis Society
• Friends, family and co-workers
• Bar Associations-state/county/city
• Group Plans
• Previous attorney
Lawyers: What to ask

• What is your experience with my issue e.g.
  • Work discrimination/accommodation?
  • Is this experience in the past few years?
  • Is this experience at an administrative agency, e.g. EEOC? In state/Federal court? Both?

• Have you worked with persons with neurological conditions?
What to ask (cont.)

• Do you offer free consultations?

• What is your retainer? What is your hourly rate?

• Do you do work on a contingent fee basis?

• What happens if I am late or need to reschedule?

• Who will be doing the work on my case?

• Is there anything else I should have told you or that I should have asked you?

• Ask yourself: Do I feel comfortable with the attorney?
Remedies Under the Laws: One SIZE DOES NOT FIT ALL

• Not every remedy fits all cases. The perfect solution in your case may be different than what is appropriate for your best friend’s case

• Think LONG AND SHORT TERM

• Implementation of effective reasonable accommodation in your current job (or as part of a settlement in a new/different job)

• Deletion of all derogatory materials in all files

• Restoration of all leave (sick, annual, IWOP)

• Training if that was denied
Remedies (cont.)

• Health insurance and other benefits

• Damages - Think Compensatory Not Punitive

• Reasonable legal fees
